2 (In chambers, with counsel, no defendants.)

3 THE COURT: We're in chambers with counsel for both 4 defendants; Mr. Weinhardt and Ms. Logan, and the government, and 5 Mr. Bird is here along with his associates for Mo Yun.6 So the lawyers indicated they wanted to talk in 7 chambers about something. So, Mr. Griess, do you want to make a 8 record?9 MR. GRIESS: I do, Your Honor. It was my request.
10 And, unfortunately, I'm in the uncomfortable position today of 11 asking the court for a continuance, and let me explain it as 12 succinctly as I can. As I think everyone is aware, this is a 13 very unique and complex case in ways that are not necessarily 14 limited, that are not limited to just discovery.15 Over the last several weeks since the filing of the 16 motions, we have been in daily, constant communication with the 17 Department of Justice about the various issues that are 18 involved. Since the indictments in this case, in December for 19 Mr. Hailong and July for Ms. Yun, we have disclosed thousands of 20 pages of discovery as has been documented by the defense in 21 their motions. During conference last week when we were talking 22 about a number of issues, I alerted the defense to the fact that 23 we were dealing with some issues that may require me to ask the 24 court for a continuance but that I did not know at that point in 25 time where we would be with regard to that.

1                   As of this morning, I have been directed by the 2 Department of Justice that I cannot address the merits of these 3 motions this morning, either legally or ethically, and so, 4 reluctantly, we're asking the court to continue the hearings on 5 these motions so that we can be in a position to do that. We 6 believe a minimum of ten days would give us and the Department
7 of Justice sufficient time to put us in that position.

8                   THE COURT: Why has it been this late? I mean, 9 Mr. Bird and his associates have spent a lot of money coming 10 here. I wasn't going to give a hearing on these motions until 11 Mr. Bird pressed my law clerk, and I was out of town, and he 12 stressed at the time, and I don't think this was -- I know this 13 was not ex parte. Mr. Bird, you tell me, I think you told my 14 office that it was nuanced type of argument that you thought 15 submission orally could add to the court's understanding of the 16 issues.

17                   MR. BIRD: Precisely, Your Honor. I think the main 18 point we made -- and, by the way, it was not ex parte. It was 19 with Mr. Griess on the phone.

20                   THE COURT: Right.

21                   MR. BIRD: -- was we believed that the court's 22 resolution of the motions would necessarily bring scheduling 23 issues into effect and we wanted to address the nuances of those 24 scheduling issues, when things would be ordered, produced, when 25 motions would be filed, et cetera, live with you as opposed

1 to --

2 THE COURT: Right. And so, Mr. Griess, why are we 3 here now on the morning of hearing as opposed to ten days ago or 4 a week ago before counsel incurred the expense?

5 MR. GRIESS: Your Honor, I totally understand that, 6 and in part because I know how significant it is to have 7 decisions on these motions as soon as possible, I know how much 8 they want that and how much they need that, everybody does; but 9 it's precisely the reasons that we can't talk about it today 10 that I can't inform the court exactly what the reasons are.
11 There are both legal and ethical reasons that I can't get into 12 that and that we can't address the motions today.

13 And so the court doesn't think that we have been 14 sitting on these issues and doing nothing, I can only represent 15 to the court that that is absolutely not the case, that from the 16 moment that these motions were filed we've been in constant, 17 daily communication with the DOJ, and they've been aware of the 18 issues and were attempting to resolve the issues, and we're not 19 in that position here today.

20 THE COURT: Okay. Early on I shared with 21 Mr. Weinhardt when the first defendant appeared, I got a letter 22 out of the blue from somebody at the FJC telling me about this 23 was a, quote, national security case. So I sent it to 24 Mr. Weinhardt, and I'm sure he shared it with counsel. I mean, 25 is this what you're talking about, this is somehow you can't

1 reveal the reason that you need a continuance, is it related to 2 FISA? I mean, I need a little bit more, and I'm not -- you 3 know, I think your office always operates, you know, in an 4 ethical manner. So what's the reason you can't tell me?

5 MR. GRIESS: I can't tell you. Your Honor, I hate -- 6 I realize that this isn't going to -- believe me, I fully 7 understand the position this puts the court in in cancelling, 8 but that's exactly what I can't address.

9 THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Bird, do you need to make some 10 record here?

11 MR. BIRD: I do, Your Honor. I'm struggling with 12 where to start. As Mr. Griess says, the case was indicted in 13 December of last year against Hailong Mo. We were indicted -- 14 our client was indicted July 2nd. The case -- as far as we can 15 tell, the investigation of the case ended sometime in 2012.
16 This is not a recent matter. The government has known for -- 17 knew for over a year, maybe two years that they were 18 investigating, went to a lot of expense and trouble to surveil, 19 to wiretap, to do all sorts of things, to investigate activities 20 in 2011 and 2012. So this isn't a recent case that just got 21 indicted.

22 Then they scurry in what I would call sort of a 23 shoot and then ask questions version or method. They scurry to 24 indict our client when she's at the airport, at LAX in 25 Los Angeles on the way back to China in a very hurried way on

1 the basis of six overt acts, all of which are questionable in 2 terms of their construction of them.

3 That said, we filed these motions several weeks ago.
4 We gave a continuance to Mr. Griess. There's nothing in their 5 papers that say anything about this. We learned for the first 6 time very vaguely, and we probed on the phone when we had a 7 discovery conversation with Mr. Griess last Thursday as to what 8 he was talking about, true --

9 THE COURT: Let me interrupt, and I apologize for 10 that. So last Thursday did he say, well, there's some 11 complication here with respect to discovery that is going to 12 make our hearing next Wednesday inappropriate, or what was the 13 discussion?

14 MR. BIRD: No. As a matter of fact, what he said was, 15 he said, I hope to have discovery for you by the time of the 16 hearing next Thursday. And he said at that time, I would be 17 willing to give a day or two continuance. And we said, can you 18 tell us what you're talking about? He said, no. We said, look, 19 we can't hold off on this, we need to get going, because, Your 20 Honor, we're asking for a December 1st trial date.

21 Every time the government comes in and doesn't provide 22 us discovery, doesn't -- continues a hearing like this, they 23 are, in effect, securing the result they want, and now they 24 won't even explain to us why. They didn't explain it to us last 25 Thursday. They knew we were coming out. I e-mailed Mr. Griess

1       yesterday and said, I'm here, please send over the discovery so 2       that we can review it before the hearing. There was no 3       response, and then we show up this morning.

4           I mean, Your Honor is exactly right, we've gone to a 5       lot of effort and expense to come here and they could have told 6       us this weeks ago. They didn't have to wait until now to do it.
7       The government is the one that indicted this case. They should 8       be ready to take it to trial. And with all due respect, Your 9       Honor, we think this court should have control of its schedule, 10      not Mr. Griess and not his superiors.

11           MR. LINCENBERG: May I add? Your Honor, I'm Gary 12      Lincenberg. I'm Mr. Bird's partner.

13           Your Honor, I would suggest that the court proceed as 14      follows. The court is facing two motions, a bill of particulars 15      motion and a severance motion and they bear on the trial date.

16           THE COURT: Actually there's three.

17           MR. LINCENBERG: The waiver of speedy trial --

18           THE COURT: Yes, they want me to determine what is 19      excludable time.

20           MR. LINCENBERG: Right, the excludable time issue, 21      which, I'm sorry, we didn't oppose it.

22           THE COURT: Yes.

23           MR. LINCENBERG: The court, on the other hand, is 24      faced with a general statement from the government that they're 25      not even saying national security concerns, but that's what

1 we're all thinking in our mind, that there's some national 2 security issue that forbids them from saying why the court can't 3 hear a bill of particulars motion and a severance motion, and I 4 don't think that general statement should be enough.

5 Motions were filed on a schedule weeks ago. They were 6 responded to. The court has a record before the court. If in 7 ten days Mr. Griess comes in with new information, he can move
8 for reconsideration. That's the normal course that a court 9 would follow, if there's new facts that present itself that 10 should change the court's view of that. But we have, you know, 11 pretty defined issues here, and it was the government that chose 12 to bring these charges in the middle of what presumably is 13 against the background of a national security matter. They knew 14 what they were doing. They knew that a defendant also has 15 rights and that the speedy trial rights are paramount rights for 16 a client.

17 With all due respect, we believe we represent an 18 entirely innocent client who is separated from her family for a 19 long period of time, and we're looking to push our matter to 20 trial.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. LINCENBERG: And we believe that the court should 23 go forward, decide these motions and then, if there's something, 24 that Mr. Griess can seek reconsideration.

25 THE COURT: Mr. Weinhardt, do you want to make some

1 record here?

2 MR. WEINHARDT: Yes, Your Honor. First I think the 3 record should reflect who all is here for the government.
4 Mr. Griess, Mr. Krickbaum, Mr. Kahl and Mr. Klinefeldt himself
5 are all present. No one is here from Washington, D.C. No one 6 is here that I can tell from outside of this United States
7 Attorney's office.

8 Also for the record Mr. Beck, our co-counsel from 9 California, did travel here for this hearing for our client.

10 The reason why I want to put that on the record is I 11 feel like all of these attorneys from this U.S. Attorney's 12 office are being shoehorned into a position by somebody who 13 isn't here to say to this court why it is that they want this 14 continuance, and so I want to be clear that I'm not taking any 15 of these four lawyers to task for the position that I think they 16 have been put in this morning; but nonetheless we had a 17 discovery conference on Thursday in which Mr. Beck and I and one 18 other individual from our side were face-to-face with Jason, and 19 Mr. Bird and one of his partners were participating by 20 telephone.

21 We've written a couple of pretty extensive discovery 22 letters because both sides will agree that it's very complex, 23 there's a lot to work through. We spent at least an hour 24 talking to each other, and at that time Jason indicated that 25 there were developments in the nature of additional disclosures

1 that he thought might change the landscape or the analysis on 2 our sides about this severance issue; but since then there 3 hasn't been any additional communication, I mean, not even at 4 9 o'clock last night to tell us, we don't have these things and 5 they do change the landscape and so we want to put the hearing 6 over.

7                   Our view is exactly what Mr. Lincenberg expressed, 8 which is, you know, when the government says we can't address 9 these motions, it has. It's resisted them in writing. It's 10 stated its position. We believe oral argument will be useful to 11 the court in helping resolve them, and if then additional facts 12 are disclosed to us by the government after the court has heard 13 this that changes the landscape, either in terms of the relief 14 that our respective defendants want or in terms of why the 15 government thinks that it's not entitled to that relief, the 16 parties can inform the court; but I don't see a reason not to go 17 forward and have the oral argument on the papers that the 18 government has already filed.

19                   THE COURT: Mr. Griess, what's wrong with, even if you 20 don't argue or Mr. Krickbaum for your side, that as long as 21 they're here, what harm can come by them making their legal 22 arguments and then they can go home?

23                   MR. GRIESS: Your Honor, could I have just five 24 minutes to confer?

25                   THE COURT: Yes, sure.

2 (Pause.)

3 (The government attorneys entered chambers.)

4 MR. GRIESS: I apologize for the delay, Your Honor.

5 This is obviously not a typical case.

6 THE COURT: Yes.

7 MR. GRIESS: It's very different. We are proposing
8 two options to the court today. We're sensitive to the idea
9 that counsel has traveled here today. I was sensitive last week 10 when we discussed it. I'm limited in what I can say about it 11 and, unfortunately, that's the position I've been in for --

12 THE COURT: Mr. Griess, let me interrupt. Did 13 counsel -- I mean, we're all here speculating and assuming that 14 this is somehow related, because I read the papers about FISA
15 warrants. Is that what we're talking about? I mean, I don't 16 see what the problem is putting that out here. I can seal this 17 transcript. If that's it, why don't you just tell us.

18 MR. GRIESS: Judge, I wish I could and I can't. I've 19 been directed specifically in that regard, and I am extremely 20 sensitive to my obligations both legally and ethically and, 21 unfortunately, I've been directed not to say anything about 22 that.

23 THE COURT: Okay. I interrupted you.

24 Go ahead.

25 MR. GRIESS: I apologize.

1                   THE COURT: Yes.

2                   MR. GRIESS: The options that we would suggest are the 3 first being that we go ahead and have oral arguments on the 4 motions today. If we go forward in that regard, the government 5 would stand silent for those motions and, in fact, would move to 6 withdraw our briefs at this point in time. We would ask the 7 court not to rule today, however, and give us a chance to 8 respond when we're able to. We believe that -- although we have 9 no guarantees, but we believe ten days would put us in a 10 position to do so.

11                  The other option would be the first one I proposed, 12 that we continue this until we are able to fully respond. The 13 problem with the court hearing motions and then ruling today -- 14 and we believe that would be the biggest waste of time because 15 we believe and know that there's information that is forthcoming 16 that everybody is going to want to know and need to know, 17 including the defense and the court. It puts us in a position 18 of having to go back and retread ground that we've already 19 covered.

20                  So we would suggest either of those first two options 21 is the best way of proceeding this morning, again with apologies 22 and sensitivities to being in a situation we don't want to be 23 in.

24                  THE COURT: Well, in the information that we might 25 learn, what kind of time frame are we talking about?

1                   MR. GRIESS: Judge, we believe that ten days gives 2 us -- puts us in a position to be able to do that.

3                   THE COURT: Okay. We're going to go ahead with the 4 hearing this morning, and you can make whatever record you want, 5 make whatever requested relief you want in terms of sanctions.
6 I think this is sound discretion of the trial court, and I'll 7 try to exercise my discretion soundly.

8                   Mr. Krickbaum, are you handling the motions for the 9 government?

10                  MR. KRICKBAUM: Judge, we're not going to be speaking 11 about the motions. So if I'm handling that argument, it would 12 be very briefly.

13                  THE COURT: All right.

14                  MR. LINCENBERG: But we need to know who's not going 15 to speak first.

16                  MR. KRICKBAUM: Very important.

17                  THE COURT: Okay. But we'll proceed in open court 18 unless there's some reason we can't proceed in open court. I 19 think the presumption is that we have an open court system and 20 things are supposed to be public except when they can't be.

21                  Mr. Bird, I might ask you and Mr. Beck, you're both in 22 the Ninth Circuit, I know from talking with judges, district 23 judges, there have been FISA -- I'm speaking of Judge Fisher and 24 Judge White on the district court in the Northern District.
25 Judge Fisher on the Ninth Circuit, I know a little bit about.

1 Do you have familiarity with FISA implications or --

2 MR. BIRD: We do generally, Your Honor, yes.

3 THE COURT: Okay.

4 MR. BECK: And, Your Honor --

5 THE COURT: Yes.

6 MR. BECK: -- John Cline, who practices in 7 San Francisco and devotes his practice to FISA, has joined us as 8 co-counsel. He will become counsel of record as appropriate, 9 but he's here today to answer any procedural questions.

10 THE COURT: Okay. Well, I'm just speculating about 11 what our problem is, but I don't want you to come here and not 12 make your argument, particularly when you told my chambers that 13 it was essential for your client. So we're going to go ahead 14 with our submission today.

15 MR. BIRD: Thank you, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: All right.

17 MR. BIRD: Could we just have five minutes outside?

18 THE COURT: You sure can.

19 MR. BIRD: Thank you, Your Honor.

20 (Recess at 10:25 a.m., until 10:30 a.m.)

21 THE COURT: Be seated.

22 THE CLERK: Your Honor, the case before the court this 23 morning is 4:13-CR-147, the United States of America versus Mo
24 Yun and Mo Hailong.

25 Counsel, please enter your appearances for the record.

1                   MR. BIRD: Good morning, Your Honor. Terry Bird 2 representing the defendant Mo Yun who is present in the 3 courtroom.

4                   MR. LINCENBERG: Along with Gary Lincenberg and Leon 5 Spies.

6                   THE COURT: All right. Good morning.

7                   MR. WEINHARDT: Your Honor, Mark Weinhardt and Holly
8 Logan from Weinhardt & Logan and Mark Beck from the Mark Beck
9 Law Firm for the defendant Mo Hailong --

10                  THE COURT: All right.

11                  MR. WEINHARDT: -- who is present.

12                  MR. GRIESS: Your Honor, Jason Griess representing the 13 United States.

14                  MR. KRICKBAUM: And Marc Krickbaum on behalf of the 15 United States.

16                  THE COURT: Good morning.

17                  Mr. Bird, two of the motions are yours, so if you want 18 to proceed, you may do so.

19                  MR. BIRD: Thank you, Your Honor.

20                  I will be addressing the severance motion, Your Honor.
21 Mr. Lincenberg will address the bill of particulars.

22                  Your Honor, since the outset of this case, it has been 23 our perception that the government has indulged in what I call a 24 shoot first and ask questions later approach. Our client was 25 visiting in Los Angeles in late June and then was arrested at

1 LAX on her way back to China. Prior to that time there had been 2 no mention of my client in any of the previous indictment that 3 was returned in December of 2013 against her brother. There had 4 been no mention of her in the preceding complaints. It wasn't 5 until her indictment on July 2nd that six separate excerpts, cut 6 and paste excerpts as described by Special Agent Betten, first 7 surfaced and we learned that the government would charge our 8 client.

9 Since that time there has been no additional evidence
10 forthcoming. Those excerpts, contrary to the description 11 provided by the government in its briefs, do not involve any 12 discussion by her of the theft of trade secrets. There is 13 nothing in those six excerpts, cut and paste excerpts, which 14 discuss the theft of trade secrets; but on the basis of a 15 retroactive interpretation of those benign statements, the 16 government argues that she is a co-conspirator.

17 You will recall at the bail hearing that we had on 18 July 17th that Agent Betten acknowledged, as he had to, that the 19 charges, the excerpts, the cut and paste excerpts, that were 20 the -- that embodied the entirety of the allegations against our 21 client, direct allegations against our client were, in fact, 22 interpreted in light of actions in 2011 and 2012.

23 I should have mentioned that the original indictment 24 that was returned in December of 2013 not only does not mention
25 Mo Yun, but the indictment as it was alleged in December of 2013

1 describes the conspiracy as having taken place essentially in 2 2011 and 2012. There was no mention of earlier activity or 3 discussions.

4 So our position generally is that the government has 5 distorted -- and I would go through two or three of these cut 6 and paste excerpts to describe for you in particular, in fact, 7 where Mr. Krickbaum talks about our client being in charge or 8 instructing --

9 THE COURT: Yes, I was reading Mr. Krickbaum's 10 submissions, his document 105 at page 6, and I didn't see in 11 your response any answer to -- the way I understood 12 Mr. Krickbaum's submission was -- and this is my 13 characterization, not his -- that it appeared that she was 14 directing the conspiracy.

15 MR. BIRD: Right. And what they do is in paragraphs 16 28 and 29, they talk -- they use the word "instructed," but when 17 the court will actually look at the cut and paste excerpts, even 18 assuming that those are authenticated, even assuming that that's 19 my client and that these excerpts are trustworthy and will be 20 admitted in evidence, you can see, Your Honor, that they've 21 distorted the language in those paragraphs -- in the actual cut 22 and paste excerpts.

23 If we look, for instance, at the actual excerpts, the 24 actual reading is you can send, you can send -- let me get it.
25 Just a moment, Your Honor. "You can send to Dr. Lei." It

1 doesn't say you must send or I'm instructing you to send. "You 2 can send." And if you read the actual excerpts, you'll see that 3 this person that they've identified as my client is very -- 4 lacks all knowledge about the corn seeds, misstates -- doesn't 5 understand that some corn is for animal feed and some corn is 6 for human consumption, and clearly they discuss securing these 7 seeds, the people who are alleged to be my client and the 8 defendant Mo Hailong, in the context that we discussed July 17th 9 of publicly available information, the Burpee web site and the 10 U.S. Department of Agriculture web site, and yet what they've 11 done is take 2011, 2012 surveillance and allegations and 12 interpreted these six cut and paste excerpts in the way that 13 serves their purposes. That's the context in which we've asked 14 for the court to sever these defendants.

15 Now, let me address some of the law involved in the 16 court's decision because I think the government has turned the 17 Zafiro case on its head. That opinion written by Justice Sandra 18 Day O'Connor clearly stands for the proposition that there are 19 no bright line rules which should be applied in the context of a 20 severance motion. In fact, the defense in that case, according 21 to Justice O'Connor, asked for a bright line rule to be 22 constructed and the Supreme Court rejected that proposition.
23 And, in fact, what Justice O'Connor ultimately said is that the 24 risk of prejudice, which is part of the issue under rule 14, 25 will vary with the facts in each case, and district courts may

1 find prejudice in situations not discussed here.

2 Now, what the government has done in its brief, has 3 suggested that there is, believe it or not, a bright line rule 4 that we have to show that the defenses must be irreconcilable or 5 that the jury will be unable to compartmentalize the evidence.
6 And what I'm suggesting respectfully, Your Honor, is that 7 misunderstands and turns Zafiro and the Eighth Circuit law on 8 the question of severance on its head.

9 THE COURT: Mr. Bird, let me interrupt. My law clerk 10 just handed me a note telling me we haven't sworn the 11 interpreter.

12 MR. BIRD: Oh, sorry, Your Honor.

13 THE LAW CLERK: Mr. Interpreter, would you stand and 14 raise your right hand.

15 (The interpreter, Chau Lau, was sworn by the clerk.)

16 THE COURT: Mr. Bird, I apologize. You were talking 17 about Justice O'Connor in Zafiro and the bright line rule that 18 the government -- you say the government now seeks to impose?

19 MR. BIRD: Right. The point is simply this, Your 20 Honor. What the government wants to say is that we haven't fit 21 into these neat little cabinets, these little notches. We 22 haven't proved this, we didn't prove this, we have to prove 23 that, we didn't prove that. And what I'm suggesting to the 24 court is that's not the way this works. Rule 14 talks about 25 prejudice. If the court finds that there's prejudice, then the

1 court can sever this case, and we urge the court respectfully to 2 do that because we think there's real prejudice here.

3 Now, I would also note when they talk about cases, the 4 Eighth Circuit cases, like Sandstrom, Hively, Mickelson, Kime, 5 these are all cases, all cases where there were -- there was 6 live testimony. There was an abundance of evidence, and what 7 the Eighth Circuit did, contrary to the situation that we have 8 here in this district court, was to consider whether or not 9 there was an abuse of discretion, and all the Eighth Circuit
10 said in those cases is because there's overwhelming evidence 11 essentially as to both defendants in that case, that severance 12 was not an abuse of discretion. That doesn't change the fact in 13 any way that this court has inherent discretion to decide 14 whether there is sufficient prejudice to sever these two 15 defendants.

16 THE COURT: Mr. Bird, here is what I want to talk 17 about. Kime tells me this. "Rarely, if ever, will it be 18 improper for co-conspirators to be tried together. What is 19 required is an affirmative demonstration that the joinder
20 prejudiced the movant's right to a fair trial. Mere disparity 21 of evidence against codefendants or the alleged prejudicial 22 spillover effect of evidence against a codefendant are not 23 grounds for severance absent a showing that the jury will be 24 unable to compartmentalize the evidence against each individual 25 defendant."

1                   Now, going from Kime to Sandstrom that we just 2 mentioned, "Prejudice must be real and more than speculative," 3 and I've never figured out what discretion is beyond being when 4 you try and define it, you don't do --

5                   MR. BIRD: You'll know it when you see it.

6                   THE COURT: So if mere disparity is not the answer -- 7 and, you know, I tried to find in some of these cases where a 8 district court and the Court of Appeals had, in fact, granted a 9 severance. Almost all of the law on all of these cases affirmed 10 the district court's discretion. So, I guess, where is the real 11 prejudice here that is more than speculative?

12                  MR. BIRD: All right. Let's talk about that. First 13 of all, there are cases, even a recent case, Nyuon, N-Y-U-O-N, I 14 believe it is, a district court case out of the Northern 15 District of Iowa -- and I can give the court the cite on that; I 16 don't think it's in our briefs -- talks about the fact that the 17 Sixth Amendment right to a speedy trial as established in the 18 Klopfer case in the Supreme Court, 386 U.S. 213, is a 19 fundamental right, is as fundamental as any of the rights 20 secured by the Sixth Amendment. That proposition has been 21 adopted by the Eighth Circuit to talk about the type of 22 prejudice that exists here. Our client, if the government has 23 its way and if severance isn't granted, will be tried sometime 24 next year. We don't know when. And I think you're going to 25 hear from my colleagues on the defense side that they don't

1 believe they're going to be ready to go to trial until as late 2 as next fall --

3 THE COURT: Well, this gets me to the government's 4 motion, which my understanding is going to be withdrawn, but my 5 understanding is if that's true and the joinder remains, your 6 client is tied to the other defendant's Mr. Hailong's speedy 7 trial clock.

8 MR. BIRD: Yes.

9 THE COURT: Is that the wrong --

10 MR. BIRD: We accept that, and we actually filed a 11 note in opposition to the government's motion. We understand 12 that because we thought we were going to have -- we're arguing 13 for a December 1st trial, but we're not giving up our rights to 14 a speedy trial. And we take issue with the government's brief
15 that suggests that all of this is subsumed by the Speedy Trial
16 Act and that a severance is part of that. As the district court 17 said in the Nyuon case, where you've got a situation where 18 simultaneous -- or a common trial between co-defendants requires 19 the confinement of a defendant for an unreasonable period of 20 time, severance is appropriate.

21 And, you know, I think that my colleague is going to 22 talk to you more about the Barker versus Wingo, 407 U.S. 514, 23 and Stockman and the Titlbach case from the Eighth Circuit that 24 make it clear that the Eighth Circuit courts will grant 25 severance when they believe that there is an unreasonable period

1 of time in which the defendant is going to be confined because 2 of the speedy trial rights, and we think that's what is going to 3 happen in this case, Your Honor. That's why we want to get to 4 trial in December. So there is real prejudice in this case.

5 Now, let's address the spillover question that Your 6 Honor raised. We think that there is spillover for some of the 7 reasons I've already addressed. Is the evidence different?

8 Yes, it is. Six excerpts, and Your Honor has -- we've gone 9 through some of those on July 17, and I've addressed a couple of 10 them quickly here. I'm prepared to go through all of them if 11 the court wants to, but I ask you to compare the excerpts with 12 the government's version of that.

13 The evidence that the government alleges in its 14 indictment does not involve any, any recording of an intention 15 or act to steal a trade secret as opposed to securing seeds.
16 And what the government has done is to take actions two to three 17 years after my client was no longer -- and they admit this, 18 because they say she left the company in March of 2009. The 19 evidence will ultimately show that she actually left the company 20 in the fall of 2008 when she was pregnant with her second child.

21 So there's a two- or three-year gap between the 22 allegations that they filed, the six cut and paste excerpts, and 23 the operative allegations that were filed in the first 24 indictment in 2011 and 2012. And there's nothing, not one 25 allegation about any activity that my client was involved in in 1 2011 or 2012. And on that basis they seek to apply Pinkerton.

2 Pinkerton was an ongoing mail fraud conspiracy. We're all
3 familiar with Pinkerton. That's factually completely different
4 from this case. There was no gap in Pinkerton. There was no 5 two- or three-year hiatus, and we ultimately will argue to the 6 court during our motions in limine that, in fact, that gap
7 constitutes a severance, if you will, of the alleged conspiracy 8 and a withdrawal, effectively a withdrawal, even if one assumes 9 that the government's allegation is accurate that she was -- 10 that our client was involved in a conspiracy in the first place, 11 which we don't think they can establish and we don't think 12 independent evidence will establish.

13 So there is spillover because our client will be 14 required to answer to the jury questions about what happened in 15 2011, 2012, more importantly, what happened in 2007, 2008, based 16 on the government's stretch, distorted rendition of what those 17 words, the word "instructed" in paragraphs 28 and 29 where they 18 take her word, you can do this, and they call that an 19 instruction and, therefore, she automatically becomes one of the 20 leaders of this conspiracy.

21 You know, if the government has its way, Your Honor, 22 they can allege anything they want and they can say, well, it's 23 up to the jury, it goes to the weight of the evidence; but that 24 ought not to be the way it works. There has to be some rational 25 basis for their allegation. And in this instance the court can

1 look at the face of the indictment and it can look at the 2 excerpts and say there is no rational basis for that or at a 3 minimum, as the court has already done, can say that's very thin 4 evidence. And because of that thin evidence as compared to our 5 co-defendant who allegedly they say did a number of things in 6 2011 and 2012, there is going to be spillover.

7                   There's no way that a jury, even with a carefully 8 crafted jury instruction, is going to be able to distinguish the 9 brother of her co-defendant, the wife as they've alleged in 10 black and white, the wife of the chairman of this company, who 11 is Chinese, who's living -- who lives thousands of miles away, 12 is somehow separate and different from when the government takes 13 that kind of language and distorts it and says, "You can do 14 this" and make that an instruction that that's what she's 15 supposed to do.

16                   THE COURT: Okay. Mr. Bird, I'm going to take your 17 argument. This is from the last part of Sandstrom. "A 18 defendant can show real prejudice either" -- and this is either, 19 so there's two ways -- "by showing that his defense is 20 irreconcilable with the defense of his codefendant...or that the 21 jury will be unable to compartmentalize the evidence as it 22 relates to separate defendants."

23                   I think you're claiming both, aren't you?

24                   MR. BIRD: We're saying that there's -- yes, we're 25 claiming both of those.

1                   THE COURT: All right.

2                   MR. BIRD: But we're also saying beyond that, Your 3 Honor, that the court can look at other factors, that you have 4 the inherent discretion, and, in fact, Sandra Day O'Connor,
5 Justice O'Connor, made that clear. She said not only will it 6 vary from case to case, but she pointed out two or three 7 instances in which the court might find an exercise of 8 discretion -- in its exercise of discretion that there ought to 9 be a severance. She said by way of example when there's 10 evidence that a jury should not consider against one defendant 11 and would be excluded if the cases were severed. We have that 12 here, Your Honor.

13                  We're going to raise a Bruton argument. We're going 14 to raise a Sixth Amendment argument as to those excerpts. We're 15 not only going to argue that they can't be authenticated, but 16 we're going to say that there's a Bruton problem here and that 17 they ought not be introduced as those other -- those other 18 alleged co-conspirator statements should not be introduced as to 19 us.

20                  A second example that Justice O'Connor used in the 21 Zafiro case, she said when there are differing degrees of 22 culpability for defendants. The government has acknowledged to 23 this court that this is a unique case, this is a unique case, 24 and one of the aspects of it that makes it so unique is the 25 differing degree of alleged culpability for these defendants.

1 It's vast. The difference is enormous. There is not only a 2 two- or three-year gap in the allegations, there's a great gap 3 in the level of alleged culpability between these two, and that 4 is going to be part of the spillover. And that's one of the 5 things that Justice O'Connor pointed to in the Zafiro case that 6 courts like this court should take into consideration.

7 Your Honor, I understand the circumstances under which 8 these arguments are being made, and we will address, after the 9 government has an opportunity to state its position, the effects
10 of that; but I did want to advise the court, one of the things 11 that the government said in its brief is that we hadn't filed 12 certain motions yet. Of course, there are vast amounts of 13 discovery which have not been made to us in this case. I think 14 the court is aware of some of that already.

15 As my colleague, Mr. Weinhardt, has already made the 16 court aware, long detailed letters seeking that discovery have 17 been filed with the government, and it's in significant part 18 because we haven't received that discovery that our motions 19 haven't been filed. Let me make this clear. We're prepared to 20 file motions concerning those co-conspirator statements, 21 authenticity issues, the statements at LAX that the government
22 seeks to rely on, and other issues very quickly. I'm prepared 23 to address some of the admissibility arguments to the court 24 today; but we're also prepared to file those motions.

25 So why is that important? Because as I noted to the

1 court's clerk a few weeks ago, one of the things that we wanted 2 to address personally to the court today was how -- when the 3 court sets December 1st as the trial date in this matter, how we 4 are going to get from here to there in a timely and effective
5 and efficient way. And our position is that we respectfully ask 6 the court to set hard and fast discovery dates with sanctions if 7 those discovery dates are not met and hard and fast motion dates 8 so that we can follow up on the discovery that is made with all 9 of the motions in limine, with all of the suppression motions, 10 with all of the motions that we would bring so that this court
11 can consider these motions between now and December 1st.

12 THE COURT: Well, I don't want to argue for counsel
13 for the opportunity to be here in December and January, Counsel.

14 MR. BIRD: Well, we understand that it's going to be a 15 little bit different than it is right now, Your Honor, but we're 16 prepared to survive that.

17 THE COURT: Okay.

18 MR. BIRD: So it's important, and we're prepared to 19 address with the court in more length today, and by the court's 20 inquiries, as to how we might go about structuring those hard 21 and fast deadlines.

22 THE COURT: Mr. Bird, all of the lawyers here are very 23 competent and capable, and I'm hopeful that we can come to some 24 agreement with the government and you and the other defendant
25 about discovery and get to the merits here because I think

1 these -- you're mentioning the Sixth Amendment right of both 2 defendants in Barker versus Wingo, and the government obviously 3 has important interests here, too, but I know that you're all 4 reasonable and that we'll get this done.

5 MR. BIRD: Thank you, Your Honor. I am confident of 6 that as well, Your Honor.

7 One or two other points. I know that Mr. Weinhardt is 8 going to address a couple of my points in more detail, so I'm 9 not going to steal time from him on that, on those issues; but I 10 did want to point specifically to some arguments that the 11 government made as it relates to co-conspirator statements 12 because we did not discuss some of this in our brief and I want 13 to address it quickly here.

14 THE COURT: All right.

15 MR. BIRD: When you get into the question of the Sixth 16 Amendment right under Bruton, and so forth, to confront 17 witnesses against us, against our client, we're really talking 18 in this context about whether or not the government has provided 19 sufficient requisite independent evidence, evidence independent 20 of the statements themselves.

21 Now, they've pointed to two or three categories of 22 evidence that they believe provides the foundation for 23 introducing co-conspirator statements, and when I refer to 24 co-conspirator statements, I'm talking about a couple of things.
25 I'm talking about, for instance, two of the six excerpts, the

1 cut and paste excerpts, involve alleged conversations or 2 communications between Li Shaoming and Mo Hailong. Our client 3 wasn't involved in those conversations, isn't even allegedly 4 identified as a participant in those communications, and there 5 are statements made there which the government misconstrues, but 6 nevertheless construes, as having -- as evidencing our role, 7 alleged role in this conspiracy. We're saying that those 8 excerpts alone and others similar to them where we weren't even 9 a participant, if they would be introduced against our client
10 would violate her Sixth Amendment right to confront witnesses 11 against her because they're -- and the government says, well, 12 these were co-conspirator statements, these were made in 13 furtherance of the conspiracy.

14 That doesn't get them all the way to the end point of 15 where they have to go to her. They've got to show under the 16 Mickelson case and U.S. v. Kelly, also an Eighth Circuit case, 17 and other cases like that that there is independent evidence, 18 evidence that is independent from the co-conspirator statements
19 themselves, and they can't do that here. They can't simply say, 20 well, we've got all of this evidence and then use that to 21 interpret words like "can" as an instruction later on. That's 22 what we're saying is so deceptive, disingenuous for the 23 government to try and bootstrap itself into independent 24 evidence.

25 So we would ask the court to look at Mickelson again,

1 and I know the court has already reviewed that, but look at the 2 three tests that are laid out in Ragland, 989 F.2d 980 -- I'm 3 sorry, Ragland is cited in the brief; but it's Kelly that is at 4 989 F.2d 980, that talks about the need for independent 5 evidence, what independent evidence is. We don't believe that 6 they can demonstrate through independent evidence that those 7 types of statements, co-conspirator statements, whether they 8 were made in 2007 or 2008 or in 2011 or 2012, especially in 9 2011, 2012, should be introduced against our client.

10 It's because of these type of issues that there is 11 going to be tremendous spillover and there is going to be 12 prejudice against our client, and that's why we should have, as 13 Justice O'Connor suggested in the Zafiro case, that courts such 14 as this one should consider not only level of culpability but 15 this type of evidence that should not be introduced as to one 16 defendant when it might be introduced as to another.

17 Your Honor, I will reserve the right to address the 18 scheduling issues with the court after we've heard from the 19 government and Mr. Weinhardt about these issues.

20 THE COURT: All right.

21 MR. BIRD: Unless the court has other questions, I'll 22 submit it on this.

23 THE COURT: Thank you very much. I don't.

24 MR. WEINHARDT: Your Honor, on behalf of Mo Hailong, 25 we filed a joinder in Mr. Bird's severance motion, and I wanted

1 to speak to that just briefly.

2                   We and the Mo Yun team find ourselves in radically 3 different circumstances in terms of how to defend this case.
4 While the funds of information faced by the Mo Yun team that is 5 relevant to their case is large by the standards of the average 6 case tried in this courtroom, it is relatively slight compared 7 to the funds of information with which we have to deal. And I 8 call it information, not evidence because I'm not going to 9 concede that there is evidence inculpating either defendant; but 10 the waterfront of information that we must process and 11 understand is, in my practice, unprecedented. It's 12 unprecedented first in terms of its volume in which we have had 13 multiple terabytes of information produced to us. A terabyte, 14 as I understand it, is sort of the equivalent of 17 or 18
15 hundred bankers boxes stuffed of fully printed material.

16                   There is the issue of Mandarin translation in which 17 much of the information that has been produced to us is only in 18 Mandarin and we're able only to look at it through translation.
19 And the national security aspect of this -- and our associate, 20 Mr. Cline, can speak more to this in more detail if the court is 21 curious, but when you get into the national security area, those 22 translations become just crushing in terms of the obligation 23 that they impose upon defense counsel.

24                   And the other thing that is different about this is 25 the delay in discovery produced in this case has been absolutely

1 unprecedented. So we're nine months into the case on behalf of 2 our client and discovery isn't done and we don't know when it's 3 going to be done. I've never been in a position remotely like 4 that.

5 THE COURT: Mr. Weinhardt, I read the transcript of 6 Judge Bremer's April scheduling. I get the impression from that 7 that discovery was going well. Was that incorrect?

8 MR. WEINHARDT: I don't believe that any of us in 9 April anticipated that we would be standing here on October 1st 10 awaiting further disclosures. I think it's just that simple.

11 THE COURT: Okay.

12 MR. WEINHARDT: And, yes, we were talking to each 13 other and our discussions have been cooperative and cordial, and 14 there's been no motion practice at this point. I think Mr. Beck 15 is going to want to visit with the court a little more 16 specifically about discovery, but just the idea that we're this 17 deep this into the case and rule 16 is not complete is 18 unprecedented in this court.

19 THE COURT: And as well, when I read the indictment 20 and when I try to understand male and female and inbred, hybrid, 21 can I assume that there will be expert testimony from both sides 22 of this case?

23 MR. WEINHARDT: Yes. Yes, and it will be extensive.
24 It will be like a civil technology trial in that aspect of it,
25 and we anticipate that there's going to be a pretrial disclosure

1 schedule of expert opinions that will have to be exchanged, and 2 so forth, and that that's a period that will take quite a bit of 3 time.

4 Now, Mo Yun has personal circumstances for why she 5 wants a speedy trial and she has strategic circumstances why she 6 does, and I won't speak for her. But our circumstance is that 7 we are many months from being able to competently defend this 8 case. I know in the joinder that we filed Ms. Logan was the one
9 who signed the affidavit, but she and Mr. Beck and I
10 collaborated in preparing that and issuing the opinion contained 11 in it. Collectively, we have 80 years experience among the 12 three of us defending federal criminal cases. We simply don't 13 see how we can be prepared to try this case until deep into 14 2015, and that is an irreconcilable conflict with what I think 15 Mo Yun's speedy trial and Sixth Amendment rights are.

16 What I want to talk about now is the legal basis for 17 that because the government articulated the position in its 18 brief that essentially speedy trial concerns are off limits as a 19 basis for severance, and we will articulate a different one, 20 which is the right to effective assistance of counsel because 21 absent our ability to prepare properly, that is a trial right 22 that will be compromised by the absence of severance if we are 23 forced to go to trial on a faster schedule to accommodate the Mo 24 Yun team's concerns.

25 The Zafiro opinion that Mr. Bird referenced is the 1 polestar in this area, and this slight number of words is all 2 the court needs to focus on. After its discussion of some of 3 the other more conventional grounds of severance, the court 4 says, "District courts may find prejudice in situations not 5 discussed here." In other words, the Supreme Court is leaving 6 the door open in Zafiro for any manner of prejudice to someone's 7 trial rights that could appear based upon whatever the record is 8 in that case. This is an unusual case and so it's got unusual 9 but not, as I'll show, unprecedented grounds.

10                   The government takes this snippet from the Sandstrom 11 case and tries to make it as though in the Eighth Circuit, as 12 opposed I suppose to other circuits, there are only two grounds 13 that can ever be the basis for a rule 14 severance, either 14 irreconcilable defenses or spillover. That simply is not the 15 law. What I read in Zafiro makes it plain that that's not the 16 law, but Sandstrom makes it plain that that's not the law.
17 Sandstrom was not a case about whether or not there is some 18 other grounds. Sandstrom was an irreconcilable defenses case, 19 and so that statement in Sandstrom is dicta that says nothing 20 about what the limits of severance jurisprudence are.

21                   The government makes a clever but insufficient 22 argument about the Speedy Trial Act and how it bears on whether 23 or not you can obtain a severance based upon a speedy trial 24 abuse. They cite a number of cases for the proposition that in 25 calculating the speedy trial clock that whoever is the last

1 added defendant, that person's clock is the one that everybody 2 else's clock gets reset to.

3 The problem with that analysis is that in four of the 4 six cases that they cite for that proposition, there was no
5 severance issue whatsoever. Severance was never even an issue
6 in the case. In two of the cases, and those would be the Casas 7 case from the First Circuit and the Varella case from the 8 Eleventh Circuit, there was a request for a severance on the 9 part of the defendant, and the severance was denied and the 10 circuit courts affirmed but on a fact specific ground. In other 11 words, they said no abuse of discretion denying a severance 12 here.

13 If there were a rule based upon the Speedy Trial Act 14 that says that timing considerations are not a basis for 15 severance, then the courts in Casas and Varella would have 16 denied the motions on those pure legal grounds rather than 17 denying them on abuse of discretion grounds.

18 More importantly, the Monroe case from the Sixth 19 Circuit cited by the government points exactly the opposite way.
20 In that case the defendant complained of a speedy trial
21 violation but did not move for severance, and the Sixth Circuit 22 called him out for it and said, well, Monroe at no time moved to 23 sever his trial from Calmese. In other words, the Sixth Circuit 24 is saying he didn't do the thing he needed to do if he wanted to 25 avoid a delay or an untoward delay in his trial based upon what

1 happened with the defendant -- or with the co-defendant.

2                   So really I think the law points in the direction of 3 saying that this is a proper ground for a severance, and really 4 all the courts we'll find in the cases that the government cites
5 is that the Speedy Trial Act is set up in a way that is in a 6 sense nondiscretionary, and Congress and the courts don't want a 7 nondiscretionary, relatively binary determination under this 8 statute to overwhelm the court's discretion in its ability to 9 grant a severance under rule 14.

10                  What the court will find is, if it looks around at 11 other cases, is that there are situations both on the Yun side 12 where someone wants to go to trial in a hurry and on our side 13 where someone needs more preparation where severances have been 14 confirmed.

15                  And if I may approach, I have a couple of cases that I 16 want to hand up to the court that weren't cited. The first --

17                  THE COURT: Just hand it to her.

18                  MR. WEINHARDT: The first, Your Honor, is a case that 19 Mr. Bird made reference to, the Nyuon case. That actually 20 wasn't the Northern District of Iowa. That was the District of 21 South Dakota with Judge Schreier who specifically granted a 22 severance on the basis of a defendant's speedy trial concerns.
23 In the Nyuon case -- and for record purposes, it's 2013 Westlaw
24 943635. In that case her concern was a constitutional speedy 25 trial problem under the Sixth Circuit jurisprudence under Barker

1 versus Wingo. But in a different case that I've also handed to 2 the court, United States versus Stockman, Judge Schreier did it 3 where she expressly does not find a constitutional problem, but 4 nonetheless finds a discretionary basis in that case, because 5 one of the co-defendants was ill, to grant a rule 14 severance.
6 Stockman is at 2010 Westlaw 959928.

7 Surely, if it were -- and there's one other case cited
8 in Nyuon where the District Court in South Dakota did this, in a 9 third instance. Surely, the courts up there would not be doing 10 this if it were simply out of bounds for the Eighth Circuit to 11 grant that relief.

12 On the flipside, I would like to call the attention of 13 the court to United States versus Ailsworth, A-I-L-S-W-O-R-T-H.
14 It is a district court opinion from the District of Kansas at 15 873 F. Supp. 1450. That was a situation in which there was a 16 multiple defendant case. One of the defendants lost his lawyer
17 and a new lawyer comes in for that defendant. It was a complex 18 case, and so the new lawyer says, "I need more time to prepare, 19 and so I need to sever my case from the other defendants."

20 And Judge Crow, exercising his discretion, granted it.
21 Here is what he said. He could be talking about our case.
22 "Based upon the volume and complexity of this case, it would be 23 difficult or impossible for Rice's counsel to adequately prepare 24 for trial. Although the government correctly notes that this 25 severance will require it to basically present the same evidence

1 in two separate trials" --

2 THE COURT: Mr. Weinhardt, a little slower for the 3 reporter.

4 MR. WEINHARDT: I'm sorry. My old high school and 5 college debate instincts take over.

6 THE COURT: That's all right.

7 MR. WEINHARDT: -- "the court believes that the unique 8 circumstances of this case warrants Rice's severance from the 9 other co-defendants. The court finds that the general 10 preference for trying coconspirators in a single trial is 11 outweighed by other, more compelling considerations."

12 And what the court will also find as it goes deeper 13 into the material that I've highlighted in the Ailsworth case is 14 one of the considerations was that the government, while not 15 acting in bad faith, was nonetheless dilatory in making 16 discovery disclosures just like is happening here.

17 And so we believe that independent of the Speedy Trial 18 Act concern, we have a constitutional dimension for why we're 19 entitled to a trial on a much more deliberate pace so we have 20 adequate time to prepare.

21 The one other thing that I -- oh, the court has a 22 question?

23 THE COURT: Yes, excuse me, Mr. Weinhardt.

24 Mr. Krickbaum's brief, here is the way I get severance and its 25 relationship to the speedy trial, at least the government's

1 argument. "This is no quirk of severance doctrine: The 2 preference" -- he's talking about excludable time. "This is no
3 quirk of severance doctrine: The preference for joint trials is 4 built into the Speedy Trial Act itself. The Act provides that a
5 district court must exclude time under the Act for 'a reasonable 6 period of delay when the defendant is joined for trial with a 7 codefendant as to whom the time for trial has not run and no 8 motion for severance has been granted.'"

9 So I don't think the government is saying I can't 10 sever. I think what their argument is, as I understand it, is 11 if you don't sever, the speedy trial clocks of both defendants 12 are synchronized. Is that --

13 MR. WEINHARDT: I agree in the absence of a severance 14 that they are synchronized, and we have not resisted their 15 motion about excludable time.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. WEINHARDT: In fact, we've expressly filed a 18 statement of nonresistance. So we're not contending that 19 there's a speedy trial violation. We're contending that due to 20 the unique circumstances of this case, Mo Yun I think very 21 likely has a strong Sixth Amendment argument for needing a 22 speedy trial. We have a strong Sixth Amendment right for 23 effective representation of our client for a slower trial. And 24 what I'm saying is the Speedy Trial Act does not preclude this 25 court's ability to exercise its discretion to sever in

1 recognition of those competing interests.

2 THE COURT: You're just telling me that the Speedy 3 Trial Act and her Sixth Amendment right go into the exercise of 4 discretion in addition to the factors that Mr. Bird pointed out?

5 MR. WEINHARDT: That's exactly right. So for Mo Yun, 6 that's one of the additional factors that weighs for a 7 severance. For us, our need to effectively prepare is a reason 8 why we shouldn't be dragged into an earlier trial date with her.

9 THE COURT: Okay.

10 MR. WEINHARDT: One other thing that I want to say for 11 record purposes is because we understand that more discovery is 12 coming, I want to make it clear that this is Mo Yun's motion for 13 severance, it is not ours, and we reserve the right to file one 14 of our own on other grounds, antagonistic defenses spillover, we 15 may want to call her as a witness, you know, any of the 16 recognized grounds in Zafiro. We may want to have our own 17 motion about that once we see the full breadth of discovery.
18 We're just not there yet.

19 THE COURT: Okay.

20 MR. WEINHARDT: I think Mr. Beck would like to address 21 discovery as it bears on this for just a moment.

22 THE COURT: That's fine.

23 MR. BECK: Your Honor.

24 THE COURT: Good morning.

25 MR. BECK: I know there is not a discovery motion or

1 an issue directly bearing on discovery before the court, but the 2 court has referenced discovery and there are certain assumptions 3 here that we all had that may be incorrect with regard to how 4 this case can proceed and what the dates are going to have to 5 be. We subscribe, as the court suggested we ought to, I think 6 every counsel in this case subscribes to the notion that 7 discovery timetables need to be worked out between counsel. I
8 think with gratitude we give thanks to Mr. Griess for the way
9 that he has endeavored to work with us; but what we've seen 10 today in chambers I think provides the explanation as to why the 11 government has not been able to meet the various deadlines set 12 by the magistrate for discovery.

13                   We are nine months into this case and we don't have 14 the complete rule 16 discovery. We've got 30 single spaced 15 pages of discovery clarifications and demands out to the 16 government that have yet been fulfilled. Now, there's no 17 criticism of them per se, but without deadlines set by this 18 court that will send a message to Washington, D.C. that this 19 case and the deadlines set by this court are going to have to 20 determine how this case goes --

21                   THE COURT: Mr. Beck, could you do this for me --

22                   MR. BECK: Sure.

23                   THE COURT: -- and I don't know if you want to confer 24 with Mr. Bird and Mr. Griess before you do this; but as 25 experienced and capable lawyers that I have, it seems to me that

1 you know the evidence much better than I. I would like to set a
2 schedule, but I would only do so on the advice of counsel. I 3 mean, have you suggested to the government, here is the 4 deadlines we want to work with and -- because I think you know 5 much -- I'm repeating myself. You know much more about it, the 6 government knows more about it than I do; but can't we just 7 agree on some dates?

8 MR. BECK: Delighted to.

9 THE COURT: Okay.

10 MR. BECK: What I'm hoping to leave the court with is 11 a sense from the court that deadlines may be set by this court 12 as suggested by counsel and as agreed by counsel that will be 13 the deadlines in the case.

14 THE COURT: Because when I -- let me -- when I read 15 Judge Bremer's conference with you, or maybe it was 16 Mr. Weinhardt and the government, I had the sense, you know, you 17 were -- this was back in April. You were talking about June and 18 you were talking about a placeholder. Now, I called her 19 yesterday and I said, you know, it looked to me like you're 20 talking about 2015 even back in April, and that's before we have 21 the arrest and the superseding indictment, so --

22 MR. BECK: All true, except 2015 now is the fall of 23 2015, and if the dates slip further beyond the best intentions 24 of the attorneys in this room, we're looking at moving it to the 25 following year, nothing that anyone here wants and certainly our

1 client doesn't want.

2 So with the court's permission, we will come up with 3 some dates, propose those dates and ask the court to ensure that 4 that message is heard loud and clear by, say, Washington, D.C.
5 as well.

6 THE COURT: Thank you.

7 MR. LINCENBERG: Your Honor, again, my name is Gary 8 Lincenberg.

9 One brief point in follow-up to Mr. Beck's discussion 10 with the court about discovery dates is, obviously, that needs 11 to take into account our desire to have a speedy trial and our 12 desire to get a motion schedule on board. We want to make sure 13 that we have the discovery before we start filing motions in 14 limine that may be affected by future discovery.

15 Your Honor, just as in our view the court cannot 16 afford the proper judicial respect for the speedy trial rights 17 of our client and afford our client the ability to have a fair 18 trial in an expedited and efficient context without a severance, 19 we also cannot be afforded the ability to fairly know what the 20 charges are against us without a bill of particulars.

21 Now, Your Honor, with respect to any discussion of the 22 bill of particulars, I think there are three starting points for 23 the court.

24 The first is that the cases talk in terms of the court 25 not just having discretion but, quote, broad discretion to grant

1 a bill of particulars.

2                   Second, the advisory committee to rule 7(f) -- and we 3 cited this in our papers -- specifically stated that the court 4 should take a liberal approach in granting a request for bill of 5 particulars.

6                   And the third starting point is the reason for the 7 first two, and that is the interest of fairness, that somebody 8 should know exactly what they're charged with before they have 9 to defend themselves in a federal criminal case.

10                  And here we have a complex case involving intellectual 11 property and trade secrets, a case where the indictment alone 12 spent a number of pages just talking about the background of 13 germplasm --

14                  THE COURT: Do you share Mr. Weinhardt's view about 15 the complexity, that he hadn't had a case this complex? Is 16 that -- you've been in this court for a long time. Is that your 17 sense as well?

18                  MR. LINCENBERG: Well, I think I've had a case more 19 complex, but I think that it's sort of different for the two 20 defendants because, from their point of view, there's 21 allegations of individuals going into fields and taking seeds.

22                  THE COURT: Right.

23                  MR. LINCENBERG: And the defense, obviously, will 24 largely depend upon a very complex and detailed analysis of 25 trade secret law and protections that were taken and whether

1 these were, in fact, trade secrets --

2 THE COURT: But, I mean, aren't you bound -- I mean, 3 this is a conspiracy that's alleged, a joint partnership in 4 crime. So I would assume if it's complex as to him, it's 5 equally complex as to you, or am I missing something?

6 MR. LINCENBERG: Well, it may, but it very well may 7 not because, as the court is aware, the only allegations 8 involving our client are alleged 2007 communications. As the 9 court knows, those are four years before any evidence, according 10 to the indictment, of any alleged theft or trespass onto a 11 property. And our defense, obviously, will focus very much on 12 the fact that whatever happened in 2011 has nothing to do with 13 general conversation in 2007.

14 Remember that -- well, Your Honor, the court will see 15 evidence in this case that in 2006, 2007, Hailong Mo was in the 16 United States, he begins working for a subsidiary of DBN, and 17 DBN is this company in China, and there's sort of a general goal 18 of educating ourselves on the market, on the partners to partner 19 in business and the like. That's the general context of what's 20 happening in 2007, and there's a discussion about obtaining 21 seeds and studying seeds and understanding what the market is 22 and where does the business want to go.

23 Fast forward four years, our client is long gone from 24 the company, 2011, and you see allegations of trespass onto 25 farms. And we may not need to defend against any of that, for a

1 number of reasons. First, we have motions in limine that 2 address a lot of that and what evidence will be admissible or 3 not admissible that we're going to be presenting; but, second,
4 while it's true that the government still needs to -- that there 5 may be some overlapping evidence, and we still may want to have 6 as part of our defense dealing with whether or not there was 7 even any trade secret at issue in 2011 or 2012, we believe it's 8 far more in our client's interest to be able to go to trial on 9 the evidence and address it and do it in an expedited manner.

10 THE COURT: Okay.

11 MR. LINCENBERG: And we recognize -- go ahead.

12 THE COURT: No, I didn't want to -- I interrupted you 13 before, Mr. Lincenberg. You were talking about the broad 14 discretion allowed the trial court when I think I interrupted 15 you, so I want to get back to the bill of particulars at some 16 point if we can.

17 MR. LINCENBERG: Okay. So with regard to the bill of 18 particulars, those are the three starting points and the 19 background against which the court should make its ruling. Now, 20 in that context, one thing the government says is, you know, all 21 we've charged is a conspiracy and we don't even have to prove 22 that there was a theft of a trade secret. Well, that may be the 23 case. We'll deal with jury instructions and the like at a later
24 date; but at the same time, in our conversation with Mr. Griess, 25 we said, well, do you intend to introduce evidence that there

1 was a theft of a trade secret? Because in the mountains of 2 discovery that we have received, there's no evidence of that.
3 There's evidence of trespass, perhaps. There's evidence of 4 somebody taking seed, but not that those seeds were protected
5 trade secret. And he said, yes, we do intend to introduce 6 evidence in that regard.

7                   Well, if the government intends to introduce evidence, 8 it cannot have it both ways. It cannot say it is relevant, Your 9 Honor, for us to be able to introduce this even though we don't 10 need to introduce it and at the same time not tell the defense 11 what it is that is being charged. If you look at the indictment 12 broadly, the government said, boy, we have a lot of stuff in 13 this indictment, talking about steps that can be taken to 14 protect trade secrets and the like; but the indictment itself 15 proves why you need a bill of particulars here because it has 16 contradictory steps taken by the companies in different cases.

17                   For example, if you look at paragraph 23 of the 18 indictment, paragraph 23(e) says one of the things that we, 19 Monsanto, or Pioneer sometimes do to protect our property is we 20 engage in contracts with contract growers. Well, we have no 21 idea if they're alleging that any seeds were taken from a 22 property of a contract grower and, if so, whether those were 23 seeds that the company even claims are subject to trade secret 24 protection because, obviously, if the seed that's in the 25 contract grower's field is the same seed that he bought at a

1 store that somebody from DBN bought at a store, I don't think 2 that Monsanto or Pioneer are going to even claim that those are 3 subject to protection.

4 Take a look at paragraph 23 -- well, 23(h) is where 5 they talk about this use of technology.

6 23(i) says, "Use of patents and 'plant variety 7 protection act' applications are obtained for proprietary seed 8 products."

9 Well, Your Honor, in this field, if these were 10 patented products, I would submit that they are not subject to 11 trade secret protection; they're subject to the protection of 12 patent laws perhaps and the PVPA, but not trade secret 13 protection. But the government won't tell us what they're 14 alleging. They have about 15 paragraphs where they say people 15 went into fields, and they don't indicate whether those were 16 patented seeds or simply a bunch of overt acts thrown in as part 17 of a story which doesn't give the defense an idea of what it is 18 that the government is claiming is criminal or not criminal.

19 Another interesting paragraph here is 23(g). 23(g) 20 says, "At particularly sensitive field locations, fields are 21 monitored." Well, here the government appears to distinguish 22 between sensitive fields where the companies such as Pioneer 23 perhaps are going to extensive steps perhaps to protect trade 24 secret seeds and methods, but they don't indicate whether they 25 are alleging that any of the fields fall into this 23(g)

1 paragraph that are sensitive fields that were monitored and the 2 like.

3 And you would certainly think that in the course of 4 just at least the past three years of investigation, this is 5 something that would have been covered extensively with Monsanto 6 and Pioneer and LG. We know from the discovery that we've 7 received that there have been extensive meetings and interviews 8 with folks at those companies, yet we see no evidence of that.

9 Now, I'm not here talking about discovery. That's a 10 completely separate issue. I'm talking about bill of 11 particulars, and in a bill of particulars, the defense being in 12 a position to avoid undue surprise, to be able to prepare our 13 defense, not against, for example, some of these other 14 paragraphs in the indictment, which the government may in the 15 end say are irrelevant because it's only perhaps 23(g) that is 16 at issue here, but in a complex trade secret case, we need to be 17 able to prepare and know what the charge is.

18 Now, in all of the cases that have been included in 19 our papers, there's three that were trade secret cases in 20 particular involving a bill of particular issue. And I think 21 those three are really helpful for the court because two of 22 them, the Groves case and the Latimore case were cases where the 23 bill of particulars was denied, and let's look at why. If you 24 take the Latimore case, which was an Eastern District of 25 Michigan case, there were documents contained in a cost and 1 supplier strategies -- excuse me, one moment.

2                   Sorry. The case involved cost and supplier 3 strategies, pretty straightforward trade secret stuff, and the 4 courts there said the charge gives notice of that, the 5 government has specifically pointed out that this is what's at 6 issue, not that complicated, you don't need a bill of 7 particulars.

8                   If you look at the Groves case, which was a theft of 9 documents, and, again, the court had there denied the bill of 10 particulars because those documents had been clearly identified.
11 There was a 245-page list of the particular files and names that 12 were involved, and so forth.

13                   Here, on the other hand, I would suggest that the case 14 that gets closer to our case is the Liew case, L-I-E-W, because 15 Liew was the case, the recent case in the Northern District of 16 California where a bill of particulars was granted as to some 17 counts and denied as to other counts, and the court went through 18 a careful analysis of the issue, and they said, you're talking 19 about the theft of a DuPont chemical product, which has all 20 sorts of proprietary and nonproprietary information in it, in 21 terms of how you make this product and the like, and the defense 22 needs to be able to know what it is you're claiming was trade 23 secret protected here. And, moreover, the court said, you also 24 need to tell the defense your theory here of the trade secret 25 violation. And so the court granted, in order to minimize

1 surprise at trial and assist in the expeditious and efficient 2 resolution of the matter, the court granted a bill of 3 particulars on Counts 3 and 5 in that case.

4 That's what this court's job is here today, how do I
5 as a court, Your Honor as a court, make sure that this trial 6 proceeds efficiently and fairly.

7 We have a complex issue. We're talking about seeds in 8 which Monsanto and Pioneer are saying that there's certain 9 traits in there and we arrived at them in a certain manner, and 10 so forth, and we have different steps in which we develop 11 different types of seeds, and some of them are on the market, 12 some of them are at different stages, some of them are still in 13 the lab. And we need to know what is actually being alleged 14 here, unless the government wants to take a step back and say, 15 we don't plan to introduce evidence of any of this, we're just 16 going to say there was a conspiracy to generally steal trade 17 secrets and not get into any of the alleged trespasses onto 18 property.

19 Your Honor, I would also suggest that a bill of 20 particulars is even more important here as to our client because 21 of what the government stated in the papers, which is that they 22 are going to proceed on a Pinkerton theory against our client 23 claiming that the acts of trade secret theft, which they allege 24 in 2011 and 2012, were foreseeable to somebody back in 2007 in 25 China who was having some general communications with her

1 brother. And if that's where they're going with this, then we 2 need to get into and say, all right, what exactly is it that you 3 claim was foreseeable, that you're alleging was foreseeable to 4 our client.

5 So, Your Honor, I would ask that the court should view 6 this as something where the defense is simply trying to 7 understand the specifics of a complex area, the specifics of 8 what is being charged. This should not be something where the 9 government plays hide the ball. If there's something that they 10 claim was theft of a trade secret, they should have known it a 11 long time ago. It should have been disclosed in discovery.
12 Most importantly, for purposes of this motion, it should be 13 identified in the bill of particulars.

14 THE COURT: All right.

15 MR. LINCENBERG: Thank you.

16 THE COURT: Thank you very much.

17 MR. BECK: Your Honor, may I just add briefly to that?

18 THE COURT: You may.

19 MR. BECK: At the beginning of the case, we had 20 prepared a bill of particulars and in agreement with the 21 government we decided to wait until we got discovery. Discovery 22 has come in significantly, but not all, and we've found, at 23 least it's our conclusion that we haven't found a trade secret.
24 Almost all of the seeds at issue were purchased. Now, some may 25 have been found in the ground, but those were likely patented,

1 in which case they're in the public domain.

2 So if the government's position is this is a 3 conspiracy to steal trade secrets, but they can get around a way 4 to finding trade secrets, let's hear it. If that's not their 5 theory, if there are trade secrets, please tell us. Their 6 burden in responding to this would be very slight. Our burden 7 in going through millions of pages and trying to figure out what 8 they have, what we're defending is great. We would request that 9 the court consider granting this.

10 THE COURT: All right. Thank you.

11 Mr. Griess, I know the record you made in chambers.
12 Is there some additional record you need to make here, or do you 13 want to stand on what you said in chambers or, Mr. Krickbaum?

14 MR. GRIESS: Your Honor, I would just reiterate 15 briefly that as we informed the court, in lieu of the motion to 16 continue, which, obviously, the court did not grant, we would 17 ask the court to reserve ruling on this matter, give us an 18 opportunity to be in a position where we can legally and 19 ethically respond in a complete way, which we believe certainly 20 the court is going to be helped and assisted, and counsel as 21 well, with the information ultimately we believe we'll be able 22 to respond with.

23 In addition, there's been some other cases cited 24 today. We would also like the opportunity to take a look at 25 those and be able to respond in that way.

1                   So at this time we're going to stand silent with 2 regard to the pending motions. We do not withdraw the motion, 3 our motion with regard to speedy trial that was filed. We do
4 withdraw or would ask for permission to withdraw our responses 5 to the motion pending our ability to respond more fully.

6                   THE COURT: All right. Mr. Bird and Mr. Beck, let me 7 ask you, are you in agreement with what I assume is the 8 government's position that speedy trial is properly waived as to 9 both defendants until December 1st?

10                  MR. BIRD: Yes, Your Honor.

11                  MR. BECK: Yes, Your Honor.

12                  THE COURT: All right. We'll consider the matter 13 submitted.

14                  We'll be in recess.
